Summary of the Regional Workshop

(1) Welcome/Overview of Regional Meetings

- Upon entering the Regional Workshop, each participant was given a nametag; a packet with the agenda, a handout of presentation materials, and a draft of the evaluation criteria and methodology concepts; and five colored dots.
- Saffron Capson reviewed the meeting agenda. She reviewed the project process, including sub-committee meetings and tasks and a timeline for regional workshops.

(2) Review of draft Purpose and Need statement

- Saffron Capson outlined the process the project's team took to form a draft purpose and need statement. She reviewed the draft purpose and need statement with the attendees. She requested meeting attendees review the draft purpose and need statements and contact the project team with any questions, comments. She emphasized that these materials have only been recently developed and will continue to be revised over the coming months.

(3) Review of Objectives/Evaluation Criteria

- Robin Hutcheson referred to the objectives / evaluation criteria table contained in the meeting materials packets. She did not review the table but requested attendees review the table in their own time and contact the project team with any questions or comments.

(4) Preliminary Alternatives Exercise

- Bill Lieberman gave a presentation regarding the essential components of developing a successful transit system e.g. concentrate activity centers, consider access vs. speed, use appropriate technology and free transit from traffic congestion.
- Regional workshop attendees were located around one of six tables. Each table had a map of both the study area and a map showing the greater Wasatch Front. Meeting attendees were asked to use the colored dots found in their packets to identify their homes, place of work and three other key destinations they regularly travel to.

- They were then asked to work together to identify a preferred alignment for a transit project within the South Davis region. They were also asked to indicate how riders would access this project e.g. feeders.
- Bill Lieberman gave the final portion of his presentation by outlining different transit modes. Meeting attendees were asked to specify which mode their groups' project would use.
- Each of the six groups gave a brief explanation of their groups proposed project.

(5) Next Steps and Next Meeting

- The next meeting will be held from 11:00 A.M. to 1:00 P.M. on September 13, 2007. The committee will review and narrow the proposed alternatives.
